

Arthur Peronneau Hayne to Andrew Jackson, September 20, 1815, from Correspondence of Andrew Jackson. Edited by John Spencer Bassett.

COLONEL ARTHUR P. HAYNE TO JACKSON.

Carlisle, Pa. , September 20, 1815.

My Dear General, I have already forwarded subscription papers for our friends work, from this point, to the South as far as Savannah , and to the North, as far as New-York, both places included . I am now endeavouring to find out some correspondents in the Northern and Eastern States. At all events I must send a set of proposals, to one of the chief Cities in the States of New Jersey, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New Hampshire, Rhode Island and Vermont. You are the favorite General in the New-England States, and you are certainly looked upon as the saviour of the Southern Country¹

¹ Colonel Hayne's brother, Robert Y. Hayne, wrote Major Reid from Charleston, Oct. 15, 1815, that he had appointed an agent in that city and said that one hundred subscribers had been obtained already and five hundred might be put down as the number to be expected from the state.
